This “third kind of knowledge”—beyond both random experience and ratiocination—sees things not in their temporal dimension, not in their durational existence and in relation to other particular things, but under the aspect of eternity (sub specie aeternitatis), that is, abstracted from all considerations of time and place and situated in their relationship to God and its attributes. They are apprehended, that is, in their conceptual and causal relationship to the universal essences ...

The third kind of knowledge is the knowledge that knows the essence of each and every thing as a way that God causes himself to exist. Knowing a singular thing without the explicit mediation of knowing what it composes into or is as a part of an immediate causal order and connection, is to know it intuitively as simply being a way God eternally and infinitely exists.

The third kind of knowledge. This can be referred to as Intuition, but it means something rather technical for Spinoza. The third kind of knowledge is a particularly important part of Spinoza's philosophy because it is what he thinks allows us to have adequate knowledge, and therefore know things absolutely truly. As he says:

Philosophy of Baruch Spinoza - Wikipedia means when he says, about the Third Kind of Knowledge: "This kind of knowledge proceeds from an adequate idea of the absolute essence of certain attributes of God to the adequate knowledge of the essence of things." To me it means that, unlike

The highest endeavor of the mind, and the highest virtue, is to understand things by the third kind of knowledge.

Spinoza - Knowledge of the Third Kind

Then Spinoza defines three kinds of knowledge we can attain. Third degrees knowledge. The first kind, or degree, is when someone see things as contingent, happening by chance and thus illusion of free will. By the use of reason we enter the second kind of knowledge, when we perceive things as necessary and eternal. But, that kind of knowledge

In addition to these two kinds of knowledge, there is...another, third kind, which we shall call intuitive knowledge. And this kind of knowing proceeds from an adequate idea of the formal essence of certain attributes of God to the adequate knowledge of the (NS: formal) essence of things. (Spinoza, 1994a, pp. 57, Schol. 2) Once we have an adequate of things, we can “move up” to the third kind of knowledge which is intuition.
